I believe the President himself has doubts of his ability to carry New York, but believes that by his tariff ideas he can make inroads on the Republican column in the Northwest that will offset the loss of the Empire State. He is so stubborn that it would be ridiculous to say that he was under any man's influence but his own, but it is certain that he leans towards Vilas' idea. His selection of a Democrat from Illinois as his choice for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court was a part of his bid for Northwestern support. Vilas believes that the Republican Northwestern column is not impregnable. The idea is delightful tothe President's mind.

He would be pleased beyond measure if his Administration could receive the indorsement that would be given it by his re-election. He would be delirious with joy if that indorsement could be obtained, notwithstanding the objections of New York. There is no sentimentality in his composition. He does not value old friendships. He has changed his intends about as often as he has changed his friends about as often as he has changed his suit of clothes. Those who were most eager for him to be made Sheriff of Eric county were not his most enthusiastic supporters when he was a candidate for Mayor of Buffalo; and those who hotly desired him to be the Chief Magistrate of that city were rather lukewarm when he was a candidate for Governor of that State. Men who furnished the sinews of war to make the fight in Ohio and in New York in his behalf when he ran for the presidency, with possibly two exceptions—one in Western Pennsylvania and the other in New York City—would seehing and the other in New York City—would seehing and the other in force the proposed of the control of the control of the City were an entire the proposed of the control of the him as far in shoel, this time as a pigeon Free Trade Would Soon Change Figur New York City — would see him as far in shoel; this time as a pigeon could fly in a week before they would put up a dollar to help him, No one knows this better than Cleveland. He has made sure of the South by giving it all that it has asked for and by offering free-trade doctrines to its delighted theorists. He would like to punish his old State because it has not, in his estimation, given him the enthusiastic support he thinks he is entitled to. If he cannot have the crown of Caesar, then welcome the example of Samson. I fear that in his defeat will fall the pillars of the Democratic temple. No party can afford to have its fate so indissolubly bound up with the fortunes of any one man, and the Democratic party can least afford it of all."

James Washington, a slave prospectus, giving detailed information of General Thomas Marshall, of Mason of this most marvelous discovery of the county, Ky., married a slave named century Liza and from their union sprang two children, Liza and Elizabeth. In 1832 James escaped, going to Huron, Ohio, and there he made arrangements to buy his wife and two children from their master. But while he was paying for them his wife and the child Liza died, and their master, in consideration of the sum already paid, gave him Elizabeth. Elizabeth, however, soon left him, and after wandering over Ohio and Indiana, came to Chicago, where she was married in 1844. Her husband and children died, and in 1886 she, too, passed away leaving property by will, it is claimed to Betty Kilvery, a white girl, who had been her companion for some years. James Washington, after the death o his wife, Eliza, married again and had several children. The eldest of these, a daughter, married William H. M. Bond and had three children. These three children stepped in and contested the will, claiming it to be a forgery and Certainly such an obviously unjust decree cannot stand. It is claimed by the defense that whatever may have been the status of a slave marriage prior to the war, the effect of the Emancipation Proclamation and the constitutional amendments was to restore to the slaves all those rights of which they had previously been deprived. Such, undoubtedly, was the moral design of the President who is sued the proclamation.
